February 2012

Provided significant guidance and feedback on the design of survey instruments used to prepare the Supporting Healthy Marriage (SHM) evaluation. The Supporting Healthy Marriage Evaluation: Early Impacts on Low-Income Families. (Besides C. Bryant, this group included Frank Furstenberg, Rolando Diaz-Loving, and Charles Negy. Contribution noted on page xiii of published report). The evaluation was made possible by the Administration for Children and Families (ACF) in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Evaluation Report Published February 2012 Page xiii states:

We also express great thanks to Thomas Bradbury for leading the coding lab of the videotaped observational data at UCLA. We are grateful to Paul Amato and Benjamin Karney for their helpful insights throughout the project, including during the development of the program model, and for their consultation and review of survey instruments, the analysis plan, and the report. We also are indebted to Paul Amato for his reanalysis of the data from the Survey of Marriage and Family Life, which is discussed in the body of the report. We thank Chalandra Bryant, Rolando Diaz-Loving, Frank Furstenburg, and Charles Negy for providing significant guidance and feedback on the design of the survey instruments
